

After extensive research we are finding that there is a huge difference in the way that waterless concrete cleaners attack oil on standard concrete driveways. With most other waterless products the cleaning agent is a detergent additive that is no better than a standard laundry product bought from your local grocery store. These products however are toxic and corrosive to surround metals.

Bio-Dry on the other hand is neutral in nature and contains no detergent additives. We are introducing a new product that will reduce the immediate oil stain faster and with more effectiveness for residential applications. The new product will reduce the oil stain with far greater results than before and will be marketed specifically for garage and driveway stain removal. The process will be different in nature of application and will still be a dry process.
